LoginScript Editor was developed to be a simple way to edit password scripts. We often find it necessary to make changes to the script to prevent it from being retrieved by a sniffer or prevent the specified configuration from being stolen or misused. In addition, this application makes it easy to create custom scripts that have a more personalized feel than the default ones. We've added some helpful features such as Web Server UNC paths, file and network mapping, back ups and restores, Registry and System information updates, as well as some new scripts. Key features: - Edit functions for Web Server UNC paths, file and network mapping, Registry and System information updates, as well as some new scripts - Import external scripts (web, bat, cmd, vbs, js, jse, vbe, .wsf, .reg, .hta, .html, .htm, .txt) - Print script contents with minimal effort - Save scripts to the users Favorites, one of my favorites, as well as other locations - Import scripts by file, folder or text - Allow scripts to run on a

---

remote computer (like Web Server UNC paths) - Hide a script from a file by specifying a number -
Change the default scripts directory to use instead of the
default path
(C:\loginscripts) -
Allow scripts to run through the registry (winlogon\shell\runas)
- Add and remove printers - Track and switch to your scripts folder if it gets deleted - Backup and

---

restore scripts -
Modify Registry
information - Change
the Internet Explorer Security Zone for the specified login, so it doesn't run in compatibility mode -
Choose the Internet
Explorer Security
Zone for the specified login - Unmap your network drive - Check for UAC (User Account Control)
permission - Fix
network login based on the address of the

computer as seen in the network - Call a file, which is saved on your computer that will be executed every time the user logs on to the specified computer - Change the remote computer login based on the address of the computer as seen in the remote login list
