The FI-SV subprocess control can use the following states and transitions: Q0: The subprocess is disabled. Q1: The subprocess is enabled with a stent rate of 0.0 stents per minute. Q2: The subprocess is enabled with a stent rate of 1.0 stents per minute. Q3: The subprocess is enabled with a stent rate of 7.0 stents per minute. Q4: The subprocess is enabled with a stent rate of 60.0 stents per minute. Q5: The subprocess is disabled. What is a stent rate and when to use each state, and what does this mean? A: The "stent rate" is the number of stents that are required by the implanted part of the subprocess to activate for one minute. This subprocess is supposed to be deployed in a catheter-based system, where stents are used to prevent undesirable blood flow. The rate indicates how "thick" the stents must be relative to the body (as in, how many stents per second). 0.0 indicates no stent, 1.0 indicates 1 stent per second, 7.0 indicates 1 stent per 7 seconds, 60.0 is one stent per minute. The subprocess time is required to control the implanted part of the system, thus the time between two turns off needs to be controlled. When the system requires a longer time to activate, it needs more stents, hence the higher rate.
